China is a singular version of a people and nation

- When China was founded, there were 56 nationalities
- All the nationalities think they are Chinese people and Their country is China
- Not all the nationalities speak same language and has same cultures, but we are in one family
- The descendants of the Chinese Nation
- Help each other shows that we are same group of people and no discrimination

American is part of a singular version of a people and nation

- United States made up of many different kind of race by immigrant
- All are stay in American and is American, but Each race only gets along with its own people
- In pot but every body are different to each other.
- Having discrimination to each other with their race
- Is a nation, but not together and mix in to one

In today's world, Most countries are ethnically diverse, and most are immigrants, although they are still part of the country. As a result, their ideas, communication, culture, and nationalism could not reach unity. But I don't believe that a singular version of a people or nation is an illusion, even though many countries in the world are made up of different ethnic groups, but it is not included in China because in China it can be shown that it is a singular vision of a people and nation, we call ourselves Chinese descendants, it means that no matter who you are, and we call ourselves Chinese people that live in China. In addition, everybody thinks they are Chinese and love this country and patriotism for Chinese people.

" But I haven't described Dream City. I'll try to. It is a place of many voices, where the unified singular self is an illusion. Naturally, Obama was born there. So was I. When your personal multiplicity is printed on your face, in an almost too obviously thematic manner, in your DNA, in your hair, and in the neither-this-nor-that beige of your skin—well, anyone can see you come from Dream City. In Dream City everything is doubled, everything is various. You have no choice but to cross borders and speak in tongues." (Speaking in tongues P2) This demonstrates that Obama has a dream city that everybody treats equally and is a nation, that's what he dreams for the American Africans.

I pick the topic “Some people believe that a singular version of a people or nation is an illusion. Where do you stand on this issue?” because I want to tell more about China and Chinese people, most people think Chinese are the same, but we are not, we combine with many different kinds of people and races, but we all are Chinese and help each other and protect our people and country. In also, I want to make a compare with American with one nation, and our former president Obama want to build the city with no discrimination and every body are equal and are Americans.
