My Neighborhood Williamsburg

The neighborhood in which I grew up is Williamsburg. This neighborhood is located in Brooklyn bordered by the north of Greenpoint, the south of Bedford - Stuyvesant, Bushwick, and East Williamsburg along the East River. I reside in Bushwick all my life from pre- k all up until High School. Williamsburg has become a trendy neighborhood that draws the attention of many individuals but mostly to the young folks. This is due to the different shops and activities that are around in the designated areas of Williamsburg. This neighborhood is known for locations that are modern and unique which draws the attention of many millennials. Not a Millennial yourself you say? That's okay Although this is a small town it has a lot to offer to all those who visit here or reside. There is something for everyone to do that intrigues one's attention. Williamsburg has Trendy cafes, restaurants, street art, vintage shops, bars, parks, bakeries, and so much more. All my milestones in life have been met in Williamsburg: my first job, my education, my first home with my family. Williamsburg has close access to all subways stations; it just depends on where you are located in the neighborhood. We have access to the G,J,Z,L,M subway line which connects to other subways lines and buses if one wishes to commute to a different borough in the city or even state. One modification Williamsburg could improve or enhance could be opening more affordable apartments with payable rent fees because since Williamsburgs has modernized prices of everything has increased just because of the neighborhood and the type of individual it attracts. Overall Williamsburg has been the Neighborhood I know and love and it's where I grew up. This will always be home to me even if in the long run I end up moving to a different borough or state in the end.
