

The first article talks about back then women were only thinking about one thing and it was about being a good wife and that was every young girl dream to be married and to live in a beautiful house. Back then women believed there wasn't anything else to be than a housewife being a housewife was a privilege to them because they even considered being a housewife as their occupation. During the 1950s something changed some women were starting to realize if there is more than being a housewife but of course nobody had the courage to complain or talk about with their husband. Throughout history society has made women believe that their only role in life is to have kids, be a wife and how to be a good wife and keep a husband and make sure to raise the children. All this is totally wrong but is hard to believe when everywhere you go you are being judged for not being a stay home mother or wanting something different and it's complicated because if a woman wants to do a career that's a problem and education as well is a problem and as a woman we should be able to do more than washing dishes or ironing. Overall women should be able to do what they feel like it you can be a wife but you can also have a career as well. Women should be able to do both without a problem. The second article talks about a really interesting topic when it comes to relationship or living together with your partner and his chores. Some men believe that it is only the woman's responsibility to keep the house clean because many believe that washing dishes and cleaning is made for women only. Men are so used to being taken care of by a woman that when they grow up still have that belief that women should do everything for them. I believe house chore should be share because there are two people living together in the house not just one and women shouldn't be responsible for all the house work.

The video talks about "the feminine mystique" has impacted many women into believing that there more in life than being a house wife and how you can have a personal life.a career and still be able to take care of their family.

The third article is called "thr myth of the vaginal orgasm" the main focus of this article is basically the stimulation that is needed in order for a women to have an orgasm. It also talks about the different orgasm that a vaginal and clitoris orgasm and how the vaginal is not really sensitive as the clitoris. Men tend to believe is women fault or believe is the women failure to have an orgasm through vaginal penetration and usually women are to blame are seem as a problem for not being to have an orgasm but in reality it has more to do with the fact that men don't really understand women sexuality. Women tend to not reach an orgasm because it hard to reach an orgasm in the conventional sexual positions and they were left unsatisfied. This shows that sometime women are blame for things that are totally out of their hands.
