POSTCARD

REETINGS
FROM SPAIN

Creating this postcard was my first project I created in my graphic design class. I decided on Spain as my landscape. I use Adobe Illustrator to outline my image. I then added color to contrast the blank background, texture, & type to describe my image.

ColorWheel

A color wheel displays different color schemes/vectors in a circle to show the relationship between the colors. I decided to do butterflies because they are known to already be so unique & colorful so I wanted to contribute that into my color wheel. I downloaded the image then used the hue saturation tool in Adobe Photoshop.

This is examples of typography & how you can use different elements. This type exercise helped with many of my of my design elements displayed & can also be used to add uniqueness to your typography.

A mood board is a visual display or collage of images or text to give inspiration. My mood board was inspired by what pop art I wanted to contribute into my poster. My theme was very colorful & I was inspired by a type of pop art called "wpap" I really wanted to contribute colors & textures & shapes into my poster.

My poster was designed to be displayed for an art exhibit at the seattle art museum. I chose a theme that would be challenging & complex but also catch someone's attention, my theme is wpap popart". I started of with the adobe illustator which I used to outline myself then I moved to Photoshop to add colors, shapes & typography. I am sasified with my masterpiece especially to be my first time, I really worked really hard for it to come together sucessfully.

Hireachy is a arrangement of elements that influences the order in which an human sees it. For this deisgn I used Adobe Indesign for the very firrst time. I was able to achieve a visual hirachy by changing colors & sizes in the text so sizes can vary.
